

Courtney Cooper

Courtney Cooper is the Director of Global Public Policy for WhatsApp, where she develops and executes public policy strategy across the globe on issues such as privacy, security, encryption, human rights, and digital inclusion for the world's largest private messaging service. Previously, Courtney spent more than 15 years in the U.S. national security sector as a career civil servant - at the Central Intelligence Agency and the White House. While on the National Security Council staff, she served as the Director for Afghanistan, where she helped coordinate, implement, and advance the President's policy priorities and advised senior White House officials on South Asia issues under two Administrations. Courtney also spent one year with CFR as an International Affairs Fellow, analyzing policy issues related to South Asia, insurgencies, and global peace-building efforts, and she's currently in her final year of CFR Term Membership. To help grow the next generation of public servants, she shares her passion for public service and experience in U.S national security as an adjunct professor at the University of Arizona – her alma mater. Courtney received an M.A. in International Affairs from George Washington University.
